Hours are the figure printed on the certificate for each course. Prices are per learner and were correct on 11 November 2026.

> How the hours sit against a CPD requirement. The Institution of Structural Engineers expects professionally qualified members to undertake a recommended minimum of 30 hours a year, or 90 hours over three years, of which 6 in every 30 should be health and safety and a further 6 sustainability, and it calls in records from part of the membership every three to five years. Whether a particular course counts, and under which heading, is the member's own professional judgement and their record to make.

What the certificate certifies

- Completion of the course: its lessons and, where the course has one, the end-of-course test.
- The learner's name, the course title, the date of completion and the CPD hours.
- A unique certificate number.

What it does not certify

- It is not an Institution of Structural Engineers qualification, and it is not IStructE-accredited.
- It is not a licence to practise.
- It does not confer GIStructE or any other designation.

Checking a certificate

Every certificate carries a reference in the form DB-USB-2026-0148 and the address davidbrohn.com/verify. Entering the reference there returns the holder's name, the course, the CPD hours and the date awarded, so a certificate can be checked without contacting us. Each certificate also carries a QR code linking to that check.

Buying for a team

- Seats can be bought in any number; each learner gets their own access, progress and certificate.
- Payment by invoice with a purchase order, or by card.
- Accounts are per named learner; licences are not transferable once a course has been started.
- Access runs for 26 weeks from enrolment.
